In 1984, the world of entertainment would be changed forever by the arrival of one of the ultimate classic video games: Tetris. A simple game that gets progressively more difficult with each passing level, Tetris is a game that is still beloved to this day. Thanks to its many different adaptations for seemingly every generation of gaming console including mobile phones, Tetris has been able to withstand the rapid changes in fads and popularity that many other video games fall victim to. To pay tribute to its 35th anniversary, the prestigious New Zealand Mint has released a wonderful commemorative coin that's sure to appeal to gamers and non-gamers alike.

Officially licensed by the Tetris Company, the coin was struck in one Troy ounce of highly pure 99.9% fine silver and pays homage to the monumental game with a series of fully colored Tetris blocks, or Tetriminos, on a checkered background. The release of this coin could not have come at a better time as the newest iteration of the classic video game, Tetris 99, has recently debuted allowing 99 players to play at the same time in a no-holds-barred battle royal.

Issued on behalf of Niue, a small island nation in the South Pacific Ocean, each coin is $2 legal tender comes in gorgeous Gem Proof condition and shipped in a specially designed Tetris-themed box that is shaped to look like an actual arcade cabinet. The coin's Certificate of Authenticity can be found on the base of the brightly colored box. Just 3,000 of the coins have been issued for worldwide release so if you want to get into the game, you'd better act fast. Click one of these coins to your cart today – it's the piece you've been waiting for!
